Are you interested in careers in arts education, museum curating, community engagement, human rights, or public advocacy?

Do you have an interest in how digital technologies are being used to challenge existing notions of identity, community, and citizenship?

Do you have an investment in improving the lives of citizens in Hampton Roads?

Do you want to teach college-level art, art history, geography, philosophy, religious studies, or women's studies courses?

Are you concerned with social justice, environmental ethics or the roles that art & culture can play in promoting community dialog?

Then you should consider pursuing a Master's degree in the Humanities at Old Dominion University!

Our graduates have gone on to work in diverse fields from art criticism to education, the justice system to community planning.

The Humanities MA is an interdisciplinary degree program that allows students the flexibility to craft their own curriculum by taking up to half their classes across a dozen different departments.

The Humanities Institute currently offers a concentration in Visual Studies as well as a graduate certificate in Women's Studies.

We currently offer Accelerated MA degrees in Cultural Geography, Philosophy, Visual Studies, and Women's Studies
